Part II　Reading Comprehension

Passage 1

On February 21 each year, UNESCO (联合国教科文组织) holds an International Mother Language Day. The event is to help people to pay attention to the disappearance of the world's languages. Many of them are disappearing each year. UNESCO sees this as a terrible fact.

What happens when a language dies out? Something great is lost—not just sounds and marks but the way that people understand the world and communicate with each other. They keep different cultures and traditions through languages. Kill a language and all these are killed too.

Through International Mother Language Day, more and more people gradually realize the terrible situation and try to stop it. Many upload texts, audios and videos on the website of Google's 2018 Endangered Languages Project to spread ways of communication. Also, the Myaamia Project makes efforts to save the language of the Miami tribes by encouraging people to study and communicate with it.

These activities have one thing in common—they give life to those endangered languages. People who work to keep languages alive are not limited to the past. Many young people design apps and use social media to support their activities. They "share the word" to save the world.

So, while the problem of disappearing languages remains a very serious one, there is hope. We all have a special feeling of our mother language. This is why we should remember the wise words of late president of South Africa, Nelson Mandela: "If you talk to a man in a language he understands, that goes to his head. If you talk to a man in his own language, that goes to his heart."

16. When is the International Mother Language Day held every year?

17. How do people keep different cultures and traditions?

18. What do the activities like the Myaamia Project have in common?

19. Why should we remember the wise words of Nelson Mandela?

20. Do you want to celebrate the International Mother Language Day? Why or why not?

We all enjoy being part of a group—there's no better work than teamwork, right? Actually, I disagree. Teamwork can be hard. In fact, it was so difficult. To make my job easier, I left my office job and started working from home on my own. It's a much better fit for me, and it has made me think about why teamwork can make our jobs harder rather than easier.

To start with, personalities (个性) can make team work difficult. There's often someone on the team that puts their needs first. The team often goes along with this person, whose ideas might not be the best, just the loudest. Just one difficult personality can make team work hard. Combine (结合) several challenging personality types, and it's even harder.

Not having enough time together can also make teamwork challenging. For example, I was once on a team where we never had enough time to meet as a group. To successfully work as a team, you need time together.

A final reason teamwork is difficult is because there's often no training on how to work on a team. You can't just put people in a room and expect them to work well with each other. You need to build trust with your team members. Think of football players: They aren't just given a ball and told to play. They practice and they train.

Team can be hard, but working alone has its challenges, too. When my computer doesn't work, I don't have an IT person to turn to. When I have a great idea, I don't have anyone to share it with to see if it really is a great idea. Don't get me wrong—I still like my team of one and enjoy making all of the important decisions myself. But now I realize what was wrong with the teamwork I did in the past and how good teamwork could be if done correctly. And that's useful information—because one day I might want to turn my ME TEAM into a WE TEAM.

21. Why did the writer choose to work from home on his own?

22. How many reasons that make teamwork difficult are mentioned? Please write the key words that help you find the reasons.

23. What's the topic sentence (中心句) of Paragraph 5?

24. May WE TEAM be the writer's choice one day?

25. Do you like working on a team or working alone? Why?

Passage 3

A person who writes music is known as a composer. A composer thinks of a musical idea and writes it on paper for others to read. Instead of writing words, a composer uses musical notation (记号). Other people can read the notes and play them. When they do, they're playing music that came from the composer's imagination.

Beethoven was a famous German composer. He was born in 1770 in Bonn and began learning the piano when he was only four. He also learned to play the violin. Beethoven visited Vienna, which was a very musical city, in 1787.Two other famous composers lived in Vienna at that time. Wolfgang Mozart and Joseph Haydn met Beethoven and gave his music high praise. Beethoven made friends in Vienna and returned there in 1792.He studied music with Haydn and lived in Vienna for the rest of his life.

Beethoven was known as a great pianist, but he wanted to compose his own music. He always seemed to have musical ideas in his head. His notebooks show how hard he worked to get the music just right. He often wrote and then revised his music by scratching it out (勾划), so it is possible for us to see how he was thinking about the music.

During the late 1790s, Beethoven began to lose his hearing. At first it was difficult for him to hear people and talk with them. Even when he became completely deaf, he did not stop creating music, however. He heard music in his mind even though he couldn't hear it with his ears.

Most people have heard of Beethoven's Symphony (交响乐) No.5, but they may not know he wrote it when he was growing deaf. A symphony is a long piece of music for orchestra (交响乐团). Symphony No.5 starts like this: ta-ta-ta-TUM. Beethoven used this pattern over and over in his symphony. Try saying it aloud two times: ta-ta-ta-TUM, ta-ta-ta-TUM.

Passage 4

More than one million school children in the United States have gone through a program called Reading Recovery (阅读复兴). The program is for six-year-old children with difficulties in learning to read.

Reading Recovery came to the United States in 1984. Education expert (专家) Marie Clay of New Zealand developed the program. A number of other countries also use this method. Programs are quite different from school. The Reading Recovery Council of North America says more than 25% of the United States public schools with first grades use the program.

The Reading Recovery method requires a specially trained reading teacher to work with children, one at a time. The lessons take a half hour each school day, including reading, writing and the study of the letters of the alphabet (字母表).

Reading Recovery lessons take place for twelve to twenty weeks. During the lessons, the teacher looks for ways that the child seems to learn best. Then the teacher works to help the students develop these methods to solve problems in reading. The idea is for the students to continue to use these methods each time they read.

Reading Recovery students usually read many short books. Some of the books are written in a way similar to spoken language. The students also read and write stories or messages in their own words. The material gets harder with time.

The lessons end when the students' reading ability is within the average level (平均水平) of the class. The Reading Recovery Council of North America says eighty percent of the students who finish the lessons can read and write within their class average. The leader of this program says more than ninety-nine percent of the Reading Recovery students in the schools passed the state reading examination.

31. Who developed the program Reading Recovery?

32. What do the Reading Recovery lessons include?

33. Besides reading many short books, what else do Reading Recovery students usually do?

34. When do the Reading Recovery lessons end?

35. What do you think of the program Reading Recovery?

Passage 5

How do you find happiness every single day? How do you get more out of life and live life to the fullest? There are three easy ways to help you to enjoy your daily life.

One way to find happiness within you is to show your appreciation(感激)to others. Showing appreciation gives happiness to others, at the same time, we can receive happiness in return by writing a letter of appreciation and for the reply we get.

Often maybe you are strict with yourself by telling yourself you could have done things better. Have a look at your life and think about what you have achieved today. So take 5 minutes right now to write down what you have achieved in life and what you take pride in.

Have you ever kept a diary? Sometimes writing things down will give you a clear thinking and allows you to let go of things. When you write in a diary, you have the ability to express yourself as you truly would like to be.

Each of the above three easy steps takes only 15 minutes. Not only can it produce happiness for you, but also it will help others be in good feelings. Why not have a try right now?

Title: ___36___ to find happiness
Showing appreciation to others	Write a ___37___ to give happiness to others and receive happiness in return.
Appreciating yourself	Write down your achievements and what you take 38___ in.
Having a conversation with yourself	Writing in diaries will give you a ___39___ thinking.

Conclusion (结论)	Do as any of the three steps above, and it will produce ____40____ for you.
