Part II　Reading Comprehension

Passage 1

When I was ten years old, on a family vacation to Las Vegas, I felt very uncomfortable. I was immediately taken to the hospital. It turned out that I had a big stroke(中风). It made me no longer able to talk, read, write and understand what anyone was saying to me. The entire right side of my body had no feeling.

I stayed in the hospital for months. There I met my favorite doctor. Her last visit was the most important visit of all. She sent me a box as a gift. Inside was a little toy figure of a soldier. She said, “He’s a fighter. You should be like him, David. As long as you try to be him, you can triumph over your illness at last.” She moved her arms as she was fighting to help me understand.

The next few years’ fighting was really hard. I went to lots of speech and physical treatments. I did learn to walk again, but my right arm remained unable to feel anything. Slowly, I learned to talk again. I started with one syllable(音节)-then more. It allowed me to go to a special school. But I couldn’t even spell my own name. Everything was about language and letters. Talking was hard. So was reading. I was sad. But I was still intelligent. Eventually, I decided to let life move on and do something for other stroke survivors.

To help them, I founded a nonprofit organization. I wrote a book on stroke recovery, which has become a guide for stroke survivors and their family members. To help people like me, I also keep speaking at national conferences and hospitals about how to better recover from the disease. Recently, I was invited to speak at a stroke conference to doctors and patients and tell my story.

Today, I can walk, run, and drive. But I still can’t use my right arm. However, there are so many things I can do. The fight to recover is hard. I’ll never, ever give up.

Passage 2

It was about eleven o'clock at night, and a large woman was walking alone, when a boy ran up behind her and tried to grab her purse. But the boy's weight and the weight of the purse caused him to lose his balance, so he fell on his back on the sidewalk.

The large woman simply turned around, picked the boy up by his shirt front, and shook him until his teeth rattled. Firmly gripped and sweat rolling down on his face, the boy whispered. "I'm very sorry, lady, I'm sorry." But the woman just dragged him up the street. When she got to her door, she dragged the boy inside and turned on the light.

"You go to that sink and wash your face," said the woman, "Let the water run until it gets warm," she said. "Here's a clean towel. I would lake you nowhere. We'll eat," said the woman.

"I wanted a pair of shoes," said the boy. "Well, you didn't have to grab my purse to get some new shoes," said the woman. "You could have asked me." "Madam?" The water dripping from his face, the boy looked at her.

"I was young once and I wanted things I could not get." She said. Silence. "Now you sit down while I fix us something to eat."

She heated some beans and ham, made the cocoa, and set the table. The woman did not ask the boy anything. Instead, as they ate, she told him about her job in a hotel. Then she cut him a half of her ten-cent cake. "Eat some more, son," she said.

When they finished eating, she got up and said, "Now, here, take this ten dollars and buy yourself new shoes. And next time, behave yourself, son, from now on."

She led him down the hall to the front door and opened it. "Goodnight! Behave yourself, boy!" she said. The boy wanted to say something else other than "Thank you, Madam" to her, but he couldn't. In fact, he barely managed to say "Thank you" before he shut the door. And he never saw her again.

21．How did the boy feel when he was caught by the woman?

22．Where did the woman take the boy?

23．Why did the boy try to grab the woman's purse?

24．What else might the boy say to the woman besides "thank you" at the end of the story?

25．What was the woman like?

Passage 3

The popularity of Chinese-owned video sharing service Tik Tok continues to grow among young people in the United States. As the Tik Tok app offers a wide choice of sounds, brief parts of songs and special effect tools to help create a video, it is especially popular with teens and young adults.

Tik Tok is considered a competitor to the video-sharing app Snapchat, as well as Facebook's Instagram service. Snapchat and Instagram also mainly interest young users with a wide mix of photos and videos centered largely on fashion, pop culture and humor. Last year, Tik Tok was the second-most downloaded app from Apple and Google stores. WhatsApp was downloaded the most. Research company Sensor Tower says people have downloaded the Tik Tok app 1.65 billion times.

Tik Tok has been used by many major companies to reach young people who use little or no traditional media. Companies appearing on Tik Tok can make money through advertising. Often, the companies create user "challenges" as part of their advertisement campaigns. In challenges, users are invited to publish their own videos in which they perform similar dance moves.

U. S. lawmakers have raised concerns about Tik Tok. They thought it is collecting and sharing users' data. Tik Tok has said it doesn't share information with others. Some groups and parents also have expressed concerns about videos. They thought the videos appearing on Tik Tok might be harmful to young users. A nonprofit privacy group notes on its website that many videos appearing on Tik Tok include offensive language. So the group suggests that the service is best for those over age sixteen.

Tik Tok's head of creator partnerships, Kudzi Chikumbu, said the company is working hard to make sure the app is a "safe and positive environment".

26．What is the most downloaded app on the Apple and Google stores?

27．Why did some companies create user "challenges" on Tik Tok?

Passage 4

The Yosufs’ house is unlike any other house. In the sitting room, instead of a television, there is a blackboard on the wall. For two hours every day, Mr Yosuf writes complex mathematical problems on the board. His daughter, Zuleika, copies them into an exercise book and solves them.

Zuleika is special. She’s five years old, but instead of watching cartoons or playing computer games, her favourite pastimes are solving equations and reading books. She already spends hours every day in a university library. Next year Zuleika will become Britain’s youngest “A” level student.

Not surprisingly, the Yosufs are a very clever family. Zuleika’s two sisters and a brother, aged 16, 14 and 12 are also good at maths and are already at university. Her father, who specialises in maths research, has taught them all. “Zuleika is very competitive, says her father.” She sees her brother and sisters working every day and she can’t wait to catch up with them. I remember teaching the others maths when they were eight. Zuleika solves the same problems now, although she took up maths much earlier. We could see she was interested in numbers at a much younger age. ”

So what is the secret of their success? When their first child arrived, Mr Yosuf and his wife made up their minds to teach all of their children at home. They say that home tuition combined with love and understanding has helped their children to succeed. “We’ve been patient and supportive, and they take pride in what they do,” says Mr. Yosuf. “Maybe Zuleika has a natural talent for maths, but I believe given the right surroundings, any child could do well. ”

One thing all child prodigies(神童) do have in common is a complete dedication to and love of their subject. They spend many more hours working at it than the average child, and this extra effort is reflected in their achievements. It is not necessary to be extremely talented to be a child prodigy, but you do have to have a lot of motivation.

31．What is the blackboard in the sitting room used for?

32．Why is Zuleika special?

33．What does the underlined word “surroundings” in paragraph 4 probably mean?

34．What do all child prodigies have in common according to the text?

35．What do you think of studying at home? Give your reasons.

Passage 5

Nowadays, many people have realized the importance of leadership skills. Poor leaders may cause many problems. But good leaders do better in solving problems than poor ones. Without good leaders, problems can’t be solved. Therefore, good leaders are very important. What’s more, good leaders are good at working with others. Usually they are good listeners as well. But being good leaders isn’t easy. So let me give you some suggestions to help you become a good leader.

Learn from books. Maybe nobody teaches you how to be a good leader quickly, but you can learn it on your own. Read biographies of great leaders from home and abroad. By reading, you can know that great leaders experience a lot and have their secrets of success. You can learn a lot from them. Then you will be more confident of being a good leader.

Learn from student leaders in your school. There is no doubt that those leaders who are popular with students in your school must have their advantages over others. Don’t you want to know why they are so successful? Take an active part in the activities organized by the excellent leaders and learn from them at one. Then you will know the answer.

Practice what you have learned. Find the students that have the same interests as you have and start a club. Activities should be organized regularly in the club. When the members in your club have trouble in solving problems, you should communicate with them and find out the causes of the problems. After problems are solved, you can share pleasure with them.
