2024 湖北专升本统考英语小蓝书预测卷十三

试卷获取方式

Part I　Vocabulary & Structure

1. Start of Autumn reflects the end of summer and the beginning of autumn. Although autumn just begins, hot weather will not come to _____ end.

2. Blue man didn't understand the _____ question, so there was a _____ expression on his face. (puzzle)

3. Zhang Guimei is a "mother" for more than 170 children, _____ (devote) to education at China's southwestern border for more than 40 years.

4. You cannot believe him entirely, because there is always something _____ (certain) in his deeds.

5. Mr. Smith saved an old lady out of the river. _____ great courage he showed!

6. You don't care about anything _____ yourself and your precious face.

7. A balanced diet and regular exercise can help us keep both healthy physically and _____ (mental).

8. The dog _____ (bark) for a long time, and I am following the sound to find it.

9. When he turned professional at the age of 11, Mike _____ (expect) to become a world champion by his coach and parents.

10. He didn't know whether to wait _____ go home.

11. Some social app companies were _____ (blame) because they organized photo trips to attract more youngsters.

12. It is urgent that we _____ (carry) out the alternative plan.

13. Is this the museum _____ you once visited?

14. _____ (see) from the top of a hill, the city looks very attractive.

15. He treats his elder sister as if she _____ (be) a stranger.

Part II　Reading Comprehension

Passage 1

When 16-year-old Colin Moore is out on the football field, he is putting his heart into the game and looks just like any other teenage athlete out there. But what makes him different than the rest, is that he's playing without part of his arm.

Moore was born without the lower part of his right arm, but he's never let that stop him from achieving anything he's put his mind to in his life, including football. "I've always had to have a mind of steel, heart of gold, and just move forward no matter what." Moore said.

Although his arm difference has never got in the way of anything, it's been a challenge for him. But in everything he does, he's worked twice as hard as everyone else to make sure he would succeed. Moore's goal is to be a starting center, which requires a lot of body strength. Even though he is missing an arm, he makes up for it with his fast movements and strength, making him the perfect choice for this position.

Moore looks up to the Philadelphia Eagles center Jason Kelce, and aims to be just like him one day. Moore's hard work even got him noticed by his hero. After seeing a video of Moore playing football, Kelce sent him one back. Kelce told Moore that his perseverance is a great encouragement to him. He even invited Moore to join him and the Eagles at their training camp so they could meet him.

Moore's coach Frank Holmes agrees with Kelce and compliments Moore's perseverance. "The thing I can say about Colin is this: he was born with a challenging situation, but every day he has a positive attitude and focuses fully on whatever he does. He trains hard."

16．What makes Moore different from other athletes?

_____

17．How did Moore achieve his goal?

_____

18．What did Jason Kelce do after seeing Moore play?

_____

19．What is the meaning of the underlined word in the last paragraph?

_____

20．How does Moore's story inspire you? Please explain.

_____

Passage 2

For most of her life, Suanne Laqueur's passion for storytelling was shown on the dance floor.

Although Laqueur began writing at a young age, dancing always took center stage. She majored in dance and theater at Alfred University and taught at her mother's dance studio in Croton-on-Hudson, New York, for years. But when her mother was ready to retire and an opportunity opened for Laqueur to take over the studio, she realized she had no interest in taking on the business side of her art: "Owning a studio is a lot of work — financially, logistically. I love the teaching, the choreographing (编舞), the staging, but I didn't want to own it."

Yet Laqueur's disinterest in running the studio changed when she became a self-published author. In the fall of 2013, she decided to pursue self-publishing as a way of sharing her first completed novel with friends and family. During the process, she realized that following her true passion-telling stories through writing — made the business of the art worthwhile, and owning that business meant she could direct her writing career however she chose.

Starting with her second self-published novel, she began investing more time in marketing and building her audience. Her investment paid off. Since 2014, Laqueur, now 49, has self-published six novels, which collectively have hundreds of ratings and reviews on Goodreads. Gradually, readers pay more attention to her works. In particular, her 2016 novel An Exaltation of Larks stole the show and won the grand prize at the 25th Annual Writer's Digest Self-Published Book Awards, topping more than 2, 300 entries.

"You have to write the most truthful story to you, and I think self-publishing allows that freedom," she says, "If you work with traditional publishing, it's more about what's marketable. There are trade-offs, which everyone will tell you, but by self-publishing I have control of the book, I have control of the story, and I'm cool with that."

21．Why didn't Laqueur take over her mother's studio?

_____

22．What made Laqueur change her attitude to business?

_____

23．What does the underlined part "stole the show" mean in paragraph 4 ?

_____

24．How does Laqueur enjoy the way of self-publishing?

25．Which do you think is the most important factor when pursuing your career? Please explain.

Passage 3

Putting on weight could be a side-effect of loneliness, research suggests. Women, who feel lonely, are hungrier, and they even find a big meal less satisfying. This could be the body's way of telling them to seek company, for eating has been a sociable activity throughout human evolution.

The researchers asked 42 women not to eat overnight, and then gave them a large breakfast. The women rated their hunger before and after their meal and blood samples which revealed their levels of ghrelin --- the "hunger hormone (激素)". As expected, levels of ghrelin fell after eating and then started to rise. However, the rise was much quicker in the lonely women, and they made much more of the hormone. They also said they felt hungrier. They said: "The need for social connection is essential to human nature. As a result, people may feel hungrier when they feel socially disconnected."

Interestingly, loneliness only makes thin women hungrier. It has no effect on the appetite of those who are corpulent. It isn't clear why this is, but it is possible that the shame related with being fat makes socializing less valuable for them. Other studies suggest you should choose your company carefully at mealtimes. It has been shown that we tend to mimic (模仿) our dining companion's eating habits, taking mouthfuls at the same time and eating more when our companion does. The link with appetite could help explain the range of devastating effects loneliness can have on health.

Being cut off from friends and family can raise blood pressure, stress and the risk of depression, as well as weakening the immune system (免疫系统) and a person's resistance to disease (早老性痴呆). Overall, loneliness is as damaging as smoking or not exercising.

26．How will the lonely people react, according to Paragraph 1?

27．What does the body want to tell by being hungry?

28．What is essential to human nature?

29．What does the underlined word “corpulent” probably mean?

30．What do you tend to do while feeling lonely?

Passage 4

Hi there, Aunt Joan!

How are you? Mum said you asked how I was doing, so let me tell you about my life here.

As you know, I’ve been in China for around a month now. I want to study in a local university, which is why I took those after-school Chinese classes. I decided on China because it’s a fast-developing country with trade links all over the world. Studying here could be useful in finding a good job in trade or business. What’s more, Chinese culture is really interesting, so choosing to come here was a no-brainer for me! Having said that, China isn’t like I thought it might be. I thought it would be quite old and traditional, but in many ways, the cities are just as modern as back home in Vancouver, only with lots more people! There’s so much more food to try, too, and it’s all delicious! Everywhere I go, I see restaurants and snack stalls — it seems to be a big part of their culture. Food here is very reasonably priced, so it’s great for my budget. The people I meet are all very welcoming towards me as a foreigner, and I even seem to be a point of interest! However, hardly anyone speaks English in my area, so it can be a bit overwhelming at times. But I guess that’s why I’m here — to learn.

Right now, I’m studying every day for my HSK exam (a Chinese language qualification). But I also get a chance to explore the city. I usually get up extra early each morning to enjoy a freshly made breakfast on the street, and then I often visit a park. There’s a lot of traditional culture still alive in China. The parks are full of people playing traditional instruments, playing Chinese chess, and even writing calligraphy on the ground with giant paintbrushes!

My long-term plan is to take a degree course here. But it all depends on my expenses, so I intend to find some work first. I’m staying in a hostel (招待所) dormitory right now, but I’ve put an ad online to find a friendly Chinese family for a home-stay. That way, my Chinese will improve much faster, especially my written Chinese, which I find the most difficult to grasp.

Well, that's all for now. I hope you guys can visit China sometime!

Take care!

Jim

31. What is the author's purpose in taking after-school classes?

_____

32. Why did the author decide on China? Give two of the reasons.

_____

33. What does the underlined word mean in Paragraph 2?

_____

34. Why is Jim looking for a home-stay?

_____

35. What kind of person do you think the author is? Please explain.

_____

Passage 5

Research has shown that when we volunteer — where we devote ourselves to helping others — we actually end up benefiting too. Our happiness grows. We feel more satisfied with life. We even have more energy and creativity. Basically, we have more to give.

I've noticed a pattern with my friends. Sometimes, they get into the habit of gossiping about others. They will constantly complain about their bosses or coworkers. It seems as if they get caught in this loop(闭环) of complaining, and their frustration distracts them in other parts of their life. When this happens, they become uninterested in new events or become annoyed by their colleagues or things that happen at work.

Meanwhile, I've also seen other friends go out of their way to help someone on their team or to help out on a project that have very little — or even nothing — to do with their main work. Although it seems like they won't receive anything in return, my friends benefit from these interactions. My friends have told me about the stronger relationships they've built at work and the fun they had working on new and interesting projects. They've told me about how the people they helped before have returned the favor later on. Not only that, but they have even talked about times where their boss recognized them for their work or when they were informed in advance about upcoming projects.

We often think that when we help someone else, we aren't doing anything for ourselves.

But we actually often end up getting back just as much as we give. When we step in to help someone, we often turn out to be helping ourselves as well.

Research has shown that ___36___ we help others， we end up ___37___ too.	Our happiness grows. We feel more satisfied. We have more ___38___. We build ___39___.	We have more to give. We often turn out to be ___40___.

Part Ⅲ　Error Correction

41．I became interesting in playing football thanks to a small accident. (　　) _____

A　　B　　C　　D

42．I stopped the ball and kicked it hardly back to the playground. (　　) _____

A　　B　　C　　D

43. Neither Lily or Blue man may go to the movies with you, because they are not allowed to go out. (　　) _____

A　　B　　C　　D

44. This is the most wonderful film which we have seen. (　　) _____

A　　B　　C　　D

45．I believe the fact is a sick person could feel much better after seeing a doctor.

A　　B　　C　　D

(　　) _____

Part IV　Translation

46．只有用这种方法你才能学好英语。(only)

_____.

47．我们需要带的最重要的东西是食物。（important）

_____

48．我已经告诉你很多次不要把文件带走。（file)

_____

49．你要记住将个人信息保密。（private）

_____

50．我朋友心情沮丧的原因是湖北日报拒绝了他的文章。(The reason why...)

_____

51. I enjoyed most of the classes, but some of them were quite challenging. I found Maths quite easy and enjoyable because the material was less advanced in the UK than in China. However, learning in English was a great challenge for me. There were a lot of difficult English words, especially in Geography and Biology. Class discussion is very important in the UK, but I was not good at it, because sometime I wasn't able to express myself clearly in English. Although there was not so much homework, it was still challenging. Fortunately, my teachers and classmates were always helpful and gave me lots of encouragement. My language skills improved over time.

Part V　Writing

52．假定你是学生会主席李华，你校将于本周五下午邀请著名心理学家 Professor Dong 做一场关于良好习惯与健康生活的讲座。请你以学生会的名义写一则通知，内容包括：

1. 讲座目的；

2. 活动安排。

注意：

1. 写作词数应为 80 个左右；

2. 请按如下格式在答题卡的相应位置作答。

Notice

The Students' Union