Jack Welch is among the famous CEOs because his __16__ style is taught at business schools throughout the country. He has been with the General Electric Company (GE) since 1960. Having taken GE with a market __17__ of about $12 billion, Jack Welch turned it __18__ one of the largest and most admired companies in the world, with a market value of about $500 billion, when he __19__ down as its CEO 20 years later in 2000.

As Jack Welch wrote in a letter to shareholders: "In the __20__ culture, managers got their power from secret knowledge: profit margins, market share, and etc. In the new economy, the role of the leader is to express a vision, and put it into __21__. That calls for open and caring relations with every employee and face-to-face communication. People who can't convincingly (有说服力地) express a vision won't be successful. But those who can will become even more open — because success builds up self-__22__."

Welch believe that great business leaders have to possess large amounts of energy, and know how to use that energy to __23__ others. Welch moves from meeting to meeting, conveying that message — and many more others as well, some of __24__ have become his trademarks:

- Business is __25__.
- Don't make it complicated.
- Face reality.
- Don't be afraid of change.
- Use the brains of your workers.

Part III Reading Comprehension (35%)

Directions: This part is to test your reading ability. There are two sections in it.

Section A

Directions: There are 4passages in this section. After each passage there are 5 questions. Please read the passage and write down the answer to each question with proper words.

Passage 1

Advertisement is thought of the means of making known in order to buy or sell goods or services, which aims to increase people's awareness and arouse interest. It tries to inform and to persuade. The media are all used to spread the message. The press offers a fairly cheap method, and magazines are used to reach special sections of the market. The cinema and commercial radio are useful for local market. Television, although more expensive, can be very effective. Public notices are fairly cheap and more permanent in their power of attraction. Other ways of increasing consumer interest are through exhibitions and trade fairs as well as direct mail advertisement.

There can be no doubt that the growth in advertisement is one of the most striking features of the western world in this century. Many businesses such as those handling frozen foods, liquor, tobacco and medicines have been built up largely by advertisement.

We might ask whether the cost of advertisement is paid for by the producer or by the customer. Since advertisement forms part of the cost of production, which has to be covered by the selling price, it is clear that it is the customer who pays for the advertisement. However, if large-scale advertisement leads to increased demand, production costs are reduced, and the customer pays less.

It is difficult to measure exactly the influence of advertisement on sales. When the market is growing, advertisement helps to increase demand. When the market is shrinking, advertisement may prevent a bigger fall in sales than would occur without its support. What is clear is that businesses would not pay large sums for advertisement if they were not convinced of its value to them.

26. The purpose of advertisement is to increase customers' awareness and _____.

27. According to the passage, which kinds of media are useful for local market?

_____.

28. The growth in advertisement largely contributes to building _____.

29. Who actually pays for the cost of advertisement?

_____.

30. If convinced of the value of advertisement, businesses would _____.

Passage 2

One of the most authoritative voices speaking to us today is, of course, the voice of the advertisers. It shouts at us from the television screen and the radio loudspeakers; waves to us from every page of the newspaper; signals to us from the roadside bill-boards all day and flashes messages to us in colored lights all night.

Advertising has been among England's biggest growth industries since the war. Perhaps the reason is that advertising saves the manufacturers from having to think about the customer.

At the stage of designing and developing a product, there is quite enough to think about without worrying over whether anybody will want to buy it. The designer is busy enough without adding customer-appeal to all his other problems of man-hours and machine tolerance and stress factors. So they just go ahead and make the thing and leave it to the advertiser to find clever ways of making it appeal to purchasers after they have finished it, by pretending that it confers (赋予) status, or attracts love, or signifies manliness.

Other manufacturers find advertising saves them from changing their product. And manufacturers hate change. The ideal product is one that goes on unchanged forever. If, therefore, for one reason or another, some alteration seems called for—how much better to change the image, the packet or the pitch made by the product, rather than go to all the inconvenience of changing the product itself.

34. What is an ideal product?

_____.

35. When some changes in a product are necessary, what will a manufacturer do?

He will choose to change _____.

Passage 3

Be aware of those who use the truth to cheat. When someone tells you something that is true, but leaves out important information that should be included, he can create a false impression. For example, someone might say, "I just won a hundred dollars on the lottery. It was great. I took that dollar ticket back to the store and changed it for one hundred dollars!"

This guy's a winner, maybe right, maybe not. We then discovered that he bought two hundred tickets, and only one was a winner. He's really a big loser!

He didn't say anything that was false, but he deliberately left out some important information. That's called a half-truth. Half-truths are not technically lies, but they are just as not honest.

Untrustworthy candidates in political campaigns often use this strategy. Let's say that during Governor Smith's last term, her state lost one million jobs and gained three million jobs.

Then she seeks another term. One of her opponents runs an advertisement saying, "During Governor Smith's term, the state lost one million jobs!" That's true. However, an honest statement would have been, "During Governor Smith's term, the state had a net gain of two million jobs."

Advertisers will sometimes use half-truths. It's against the law to make false claims so they try to mislead you with the truth. An advertisement might boast, "Nine out of ten doctors recommend Yucky Pills to cure nose pimples." It fails to mention that they only asked ten doctors and nine of them work for the Yucky Corporation.

This kind of deception happens too often. It's a sad fact of life: Lies are lies, and sometimes the truth can lie as well.
