Passage 1

It is crucial for us to understand how to ensure our safety when traveling in foreign countries. We have all heard stories of travelers having their wallets stolen or getting lost in unfamiliar neighborhoods. Therefore, it is essential to exercise extra caution when traveling abroad.

Remember to always carry a small amount of cash and a copy of your ID with you. There is no need to bring large sums of cash. When shopping, use your credit card instead. Put the wallet in your front pocket so that there is no way that someone's hand could get in there without your noticing it.

If possible, travel with a companion or a business partner. It is always safer to travel in pairs rather than alone. Familiarize yourself with the directions and routes to your destination. Take a look at the map before leaving the hotel so that you are aware of where you are going and how to get there.

Secure your valuable belongings either in the safe provided in your hotel room or in the main hotel safe.

Stay alert and be aware of your surroundings. When walking, make sure to look around and avoid keeping your head down.

Passage 3

Have you ever wondered where the first doughnut (炸面圈) was made? Who thought up the idea of a fried cake with a hole in the center?

No one knows for sure who made the first doughnut. Some people think that doughnut probably began in the 1800s as Dutch "olykoeks" or "oily cakes." In those days, a cook would not want to waste any scraps of food. Leftover pieces of bread dough (生面团) were put into hot oil and fried. Olykoeks were tasty on the outside, but soft and uncooked in the center.

Some people say that the mother of a New England sea captain invented the first real doughnut. Her name was Elizabeth Gregory. She replaced the soft center with spices and nuts. But, Elizabeth's son, Captain Gregory, did not like nuts. He punched out the center, and the consequence was the first hole in a doughnut.

Others say the real story is that Captain Gregory had difficulty steering his ship while trying to eat doughnut. He asked the ship's cook to make his doughnuts with holes so he could hang them on the steering wheel! Others think that Captain Gregory saw holed cakes in Europe and brought the idea back to America with him.

During World War I, homesick American soldiers in Europe were served doughnuts by the Salvation Army. These brave women volunteering for the job were called "Doughnut Girls." They often worked in dangerous conditions near the soldiers, so the Doughnut Girls wore helmets and uniforms. The women made doughnut cutters out of a large can with a smaller can inside it to cut out the hole. They could set up a kettle of hot oil to fry the

The world's rain-forests cover less than ten percent of the earth's surface, but contain over forty percent of all plant and animal species. The biggest rainforest is in South America, which is called the Amazon.

Amazon is by far the largest remaining rainforest area left on our planet. It's about 6 to 7 million square kilometers. It's about two-thirds of the size of the United States including Alaska. It's enormous. Sixty percent of it is in Brazil, but the rainforest also extends into Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia, Venezuela, French Guiana and Surinam. And amazingly each year the Amazon provides twenty percent of the world's fresh water. Here you can find at least 60-70 thousand plant species and at least 3 thousand species of fresh water fish. And more monkeys than you find anywhere else on earth. In Brazil alone nine new species of monkeys have been identified over the last year.

But many of those species, known and unknown, are destroyed every day. Moreover, constant logging, mining and raising domestic animals cause a gradual disappearance of the Amazon jungles.

36. Over forty percent of all plant and animal species on the earth live in _____.
