Passage 1

A U.N. report says water is in demand around the world as temperatures on Earth's surface rise and demand grows along with populations. The report was released this week at the World Water Forum in Brasilia. The conference has been described as the world's largest water-related event.

Federal District Governor Rodrigo Rollemberg spoke at a panel discussion on Tuesday at the forum. He described water shortages as a worldwide problem. The public water supply has less water because of low rainfall as well as fast and disorderly growth in Brasilia, which is part of the Federal District, Rollemberg said. In January 2016, after three years of little rain, district officials began limiting how much water people could consume. The governments of the Federal District and the nearby state of Goias also gave $166 million to develop water infrastructure.

Demand around the world is expected to increase by nearly one-third by 2050. By then, five billion people could be left with poor access to water, the U.N. warned in its 2018 World Water Development Report. To avoid such a crisis, U.N. officials called for "nature-based solutions" that use or copy natural processes that should be used to increase water availability. They said solutions could include sustaining water in soil, collecting rainwater, and protecting wetlands. The officials also proposed rebuilding floodplains and said that plants could be grown on housetops. Such proposals will become more important as water industries grow.

Passage 2

The United States covers a large part of the North American continent. Its neighbors are Canada to the north and Mexico to the south. Although the United States is a big country, it is not the largest in the world. In 2000, its population was over 222 million.

When this land first became a nation, after winning its independence from England, it had thirteen states. Each of the states was represented on the American flag by a star. All these states were in the eastern part of the continent. As the nation grew toward the west, new states were added and new stars appeared on the flag. For a long time, there were 48 stars. In 1959, however, two more stars were added to the flag, representing the new states of Alaska and Hawaii.

Indians were the first people of the land which is now the United States. There are still many thousands of Indians now living in all parts of the country. Sometimes it is said that the Indians are "the only real Americans". Most Americans come from all over the world. Those who came first in the greatest numbers to make their homes on the eastern coast of North America were mostly from England. It is for that reason that the language of the United States is English and that its culture and customs are more like those of England than those of any other country in the world.

21. What are the United States' neighbors?

22. After winning its independence, how many states did the United States have?

23. What did a star on the American flag mean?

_____.

24. When did the United States have fifty states?

_____.

25. Who came first on the eastern coast of North America?

Passage 3

For a long time, doctors have been aware that incredibly intense noises have the potential to cause hearing damage or even loss. The noise can be the sound of a jet airplane or machines in factories or loud music or other common sounds found at home or at work. A person only needs to be exposed to the noise for slightly longer than a second for it to have an impact on them.

An American scientist has discovered that taking aspirin(阿司匹林) can temporarily(暂时地) increase hearing loss or damage caused by loud noise. He did an experiment, using a number of male students at a university who all had normal hearing. He gave them different amounts of aspirin for different periods of time, and then he tested their hearing ability. He found that the students who were given four grams of aspirin a day for two days suffered much greater temporary hearing loss than those who did not use aspirin. The degree of hearing loss was approximately twice as severe. The scientist said millions of people in the United States use much larger amounts of aspirin than were used in the study. He said these people face a serious danger of suffering hearing loss from loud noise.

Passage 4

Volunteering is a good way to practice important skills used in the workplace. If you're considering a new career, volunteering can help you get experience in your area of interest and meet people in the field.

You might feel more comfortable stretching your wings at work once you've gained these skills in a volunteer position.

Volunteering offers you the opportunity to try out a new career. Without making a long-term effort, it is also a great way to gain experience in a new field. You can volunteer directly at an organization that does the kind of work you're interested in. Your volunteer work might also introduce you to professional organizations that could be of benefit to your career.

Volunteer work is unpaid, but this does not mean the skills you learn are basic. Many volunteering opportunities provide a wide range of training. Volunteering can also help you build upon skills you already have and use them to benefit the greater community. For instance, if you hold a successful sales position, you can further develop and improve your public speaking, communication, and marketing skills.

31. If you're considering a new career, volunteering can help you _____.

32. By saying "stretching your wings at work" (Para. 2), the author means being _____ at work.

33. Volunteering can also offer you a chance to _____.
